FLEAS

The flowers have bloomed, the lambs are frolicking, the grass has grown, the pollen is out, and the fleas are jumping. It is the season of new growth, of rebirth, sneezing, itching and scratching.

Fleas are an example of great survival and prodigious reproduction. An adult flea is capable of laying a 100 eggs a day, I find them impressive and also exceptionally annoying, so few fleas, and such a small lapse in flea control is all that is needed cause quite a large rash.

Itchy/Scratchy animals, pulling their own fur out, are such small creatures yet can cause such anguish! Last flea season seemed especially bad for the number of animals suffering from flea associated skin disease even if they previously had no difficulties with fleas.

With this spring already so warm, I am expecting fleas to once again be quite problematic. All animals must be treated for fleas, and treatments must be used at least as often as stated on the box. Not all flea control products are equal to each other, so give us a call and or come in for a chat, and we can talk through the options.
