It Tom time again.

Twice a year, spring and autumn, many neighbourhoods hear the dulcet tones of tomcats singing, as they howl at the lady cats. It is in a Tomcats nature to seek out territory to try and assert their dominance over.

These male cats seek out all the female cats in the area of adult age, all other cats are to be seen as potential competition. Tomcats are aggressive and are more likely to pick a fight with your innocent and peace-loving household cat. Cat fights are usually a lot of hiss and spit and very little actual fight, tomcats however are much more likely to do everything they can to dominate your little cat.

They are likely to growl, yowl in a very angry manner before trying to jump on top of your cat and bite on the back of neck, if your cat tries to run away it is likely they will be bitten on the derriere. Fortunately this time of aggressive attacks by tomcats does not last long, it will be about a month before things settle down.

Meanwhile if you are concerned for your cat keep them inside at night!

The Flea Problem!

It is the season to be thinking about fleas! If you are not already, its imperative you get on a good flea control regime NOW because...

But I never see fleas on my cat!

Even if you have not seen them, they are there. For you to see them it would have to be a massive infestation.

I'll wait until I see my cat scratching a lot before I treat them.

It's the old story of prevention being better then cure. If your cat is showing signs of irritation, it could take months of treatment to break the cycle and bring them back to normal.

I'll just pick up a flea control from the supermarket

Well you can but there is no one with any training in animal health to offer advice, and there may be a product better suited to your animal and situation and you are only going to find that out by going to your friendly local vet clinic for free advice and a great range of quality products.

You guys always go on about fleas is it really a problem ?

Fleas would be one of the number one reasons your pet could become really miserable, untreated infestations can go on to cause allergy problems, untreated allergies that get scratched a lot can go on to cause broken skin and infection, it becomes a bit of a cycle really, which can take many many months to come out of.

SO the moral of my story is treat for fleas on a regular basis with a reputable product from a vet clinic you trust!
